LYKO wins the tender for the “world's most ambitious MaaS platform”

It's official! After several months of suspense and intense negotiations, the Jatelindo consortium, formed by PT Jatelindo, PT Aino, Thales and Lyko, lands the contract of the public authorities of the Greater Jakarta region in Indonesia. This 8-year contract covers the deployment and operation of a ticketing platform and a MaaS application for the world's 3rd largest metropolis.

In the final against the very high-level contender, the Merah Putih consortium formed by local leaders Indonesia Telkom, Gojek and NEC, it was finally the Jatelindo consortium, supported by the Asian giant Grab, that was chosen by Jaklingko Indonesia for the deployment and operation of a MaaS application (Mobility as a Service). This platform is intended to cover the mobility needs of nearly 30 million people and should have more than one million active users and allow for several million trips per month.

“We take this announcement with great humility and hindsight. We are aware of the challenge ahead. But this project is an excellent way for Lyko to demonstrate our business and technological expertise. But also our ambition to create the future world leader in the smart mobility market. I would like to thank our partners and Chochoy Conseil for their trust, their determination and their work. As well congratulate Lyko team for its unfailing commitment. ”

Laurent BOUZON, CEO & Co-founder of Lyko

To simplify the development and operations of the Jakarta's MaaS app, Lyko is providing its technology and API platform to connect the user interface to the distribution systems of more than 2,000 transportation operators, as well as its intermodal trip planning algorithms. A new contract opens the door to new hires and more good news coming soon for Lyko. So stay tuned.
